

Overview

D'Maris Coffman is a multi-disciplinary social scientist who works at the interstices of economic history, economic geography, infrastructure economics, and environmental economics. After training in early modern British history at the University of Pennsylvania and working for nearly a decade (2004-2014) on the political, institutional, and intellectual origins of the financialization of the fiscal state and of grain commodity markets, she grew passionate about the urgent need to understand how to build state capacity to respond to the climate emergency and to accelerate global transitions to low carbon economies. Her recent research has focussed on projects as diverse as the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on global supply chains, the role of the Corporation of London in financing the rebuilding of the City after the Great Fire, and the potential for the sharing economy to improve the sustainability and resilience of urban transport networks. With her PhD students and research colleagues, she co-authors empirical policy evaluations of different strategies to support energy transitions, investigating in turn optimal overall policy mixes, the impacts of individual policies, and the co-mitigation potentials of simultaneous reduction of air pollution and greenhouse gasses. She has contributed to a small but growing literature on the challenges that negative emissions technologies and climate engineering pose for global governance, writes occasionally on Freudian critical theory, and has recently published her own translation of a canonical Italian essay by Luigi Pasinetti on the continued importance of François Quesnay's Tableau économique for modern economic theory.

From February 2017 to July 2023, Professor Coffman was Director of the Bartlett School of Sustainable Construction, where she leads over 80 members of staff (62 academics and 25 professional services staff members), 12 degree programmes (with a sectoral MBA and new integrated master's programme, MSci, opening next year), over 700 students (850 as part of the 20/21 COVID bulge), and a net contribution margin of 53.2% (67.3% in 20/21). BSSC offers programmes in fields as diverse as construction economics and management, project management, infrastructure investment and finance, and real estate economics, infrastructure delivery, facilities and built asset management, and digital engineering management. From August 2023, she has accepted a new role as The Bartlett's Vice Dean Innovation & Enterprise.

In recognition of her research stature and academic leadership, Professor Coffman has been recently elected Distinguished Visiting Professor at Tsinghua University's Department of Earth Systems Science. She has also recently served as a Visiting Professor at the Department of Economics, Management and Quantitative Methods at University of Milan (Statale), and the School of Public Policy & Administration at Renmin University of China. She is a Guest Professor at Beijing Institute of Technology's Centre for Energy and Environmental Policy Research, a member of the International Advisory Board of Management and Economics at Tianjin University, a member of the Advisory Board for the Centro di ricerche in analisi economica (CRANEC) at the Catholic University of Milan (Cattolica), and a member of the Academic Advisory Panel for the Global Infrastructures Hub (GI-Hub) for the G20. She has recently served as an external examiner for Economic and Social History (Pre-Honours/Honours) at Edinburgh University and the MSc Public Policy at Bristol. She is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, the Royal Geographical Society, the Society of Antiquaries of London, an Academic Associate at the Institute of Psychoanalysis, a Foreign Member of the Istituto Lombardo, and a Principal Fellow of the Higher Education Academy (PFHEA).

Professor Coffman regularly guest lectures and gives keynote addresses and invited talks at British, European, North American, and Chinese universities and related learned societies. Recent lectures have included keynote addresses at Harvard Business School, Gresham College, the Southeast World Historical Association (North America), COP26, the University of Cambridge, the University of Bologna, the University of Milan, Xi'an Jiao Tong University, the Chinese Economic Association, the Institute of Historical Research, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Sussex. She has over 130 research outputs, 11 books (including monographs, edited volumes, major reference works), over 45 primary research articles, and large number of contributed chapters, review essays, and related miscellaneous works. She is the Coordinating Editor and Editor-in-Chief of Structural Change and Economic Dynamics (IF=5.059); she also serves on editorial boards for Economia Politica: International Journal of Analytical & Institutional Economics (IF=1.143), Journal of Cleaner Production (IF=11.072), Chinese Journal of Population, Resources and Environment, and Frontiers of Engineering Management.
